A "Yellow Light" For March Driver Complaints

Below are complaints we received this month from an angry motorist. This listing is intended as an alert, not an accusation. However, we take all complaints seriously and ask that you as drivers keep in mind that you are responsible safety.

MV008 – caller claimed van cut in front of him and made several illegal lane changes and turns without signaling.

Always remember safety is the number 1 priority when traveling during your daily commute.

DC's Car Free Future

Driving in the District isn't always easy. You can find yourself burning gasoline while stuck in traffic, feeding hungry parking meters, and tracking traffic cameras.

It appears as if city leaders are moving towards getting cars off the road in the district. Mayor Vincent Gray's environmental initiative, Sustainable DC, has a stated goal of cutting in half by 2032 the number of D.C. commuters who drive.

In an email to the Washington Examiner, the mayor's spokesman, Pedro Ribeiro, outlined the city's position. Below is an excerpt from that email:

"What we are doing is laying the groundwork for a city where residents and visitors won't need a car," Ribeiro wrote. "A city where walking, bike riding, and public transportation will meet the vast majority of transportation needs."

About half of the approximately 800,000 people who commute into the District drive a vehicle. The city's director of planning, Harriet Tregoning, said increasing costs can encourage drivers to reconsider their transportation choices.

"One of the ways to manage a scarce resource is to use price as a signal," she said. Along with leveraging cost resources the district is looking into ways to encourage other means of transportation. By 2032 DC may be a different place for commuters.
